How to Submit a Policy Roundtable

The background of the slide is a vibrant, close-up photograph of pink cherry blossoms in full bloom. The flowers are in sharp focus in the foreground, with some branches extending from the bottom left and right towards the center. The background is a clear, bright blue sky, which makes the pink flowers stand out. The overall mood is fresh and positive.

Policy Roundtable

Roundtables are not abstract dependent, but rather feature speakers who will discuss a topic from varying perspectives and draw the audience into a discussion on the topic. Roundtable proposals should include no more than 1 moderator and at least 2 presenters. Examples of potential titles include: The Future of Prescription Drug Reimbursement and Assessing and Accelerating State Implementation of Value-Based Payment Reforms.

Step One

Open the Call for Proposals page: <https://ashecon.confex.com/ashecon/2021/cfp.cgi>.

Scroll down the page then click 'Submit a Policy Roundtable'.

Title: Does Access to Food Programs Really Impact a Child's Ability to Succeed?

Submitter's Email: info@ashecon.org

Session Description: For many children across America, the free or reduced meals they receive at school is the only meals they'll eat for that particular day or week. In 2015, realizing that many of the children in their community weren't receiving the nutrients they needed to be successful in school, the Kidz Education Foundation, Anytown Municipal Council and Greer's Grocery in Anytown, DC enacted an ordinance to provide school-age children in the community with MealPack Meals throughout the week. At the end of every school day, each child was sent home with a fresh pre-packed dinner. On Fridays, they were sent home meals to get them through the weekend. Since 2015, test scores and school attendance has risen more than 20%. This roundtable will discuss how access to food can impact a child's ability to learn and how the local government can help spur a child's educational growth.
